Student Council Asks For Ma-ie Day Ideas

The Student Council proposal regarding campus dress is expected to be considered at this afternoon's meeting of the Student Activities Program Committee.

Dean Donald Pflasterer made this statement at the close of Wednesday's Student Council meeting.

The dress resolution states any "reasonable" dress be allowed on campus anywhere and at any time.

Doug Slaughter, who introduced the motion, stated it was done as a "feeler" to see at what step a similar one proposed last year died.

Another proposal raised two weeks ago, allowing the council president to participate in the selection of a permanent University president, has been sent to the Board of Regents for approval, according to president Jim Butler.

Butler also reported the committee to study present election rules has met, but has not yet initiated any proposals for further council action.

In other matters, the council requested that students offer suggestions as to a Ma-ie Day theme. These can be deposited in the suggestion box at the Student Center information desk today only.

Retreat Motivates Student Council Response

By Lothar A. Luken

SC 234 is a dull, drab and ordinary room which serves as the meeting place of a dull, drab and ordinary group, at least until recently.

With a reputation for being weak, ineffective and composed of "do-nothings", the Student Council in the course of an hour eradicated this image at a meeting which could well go down as the turning point in OU student government.

The meeting was held on a warm, sunny day, also the day before spring vacation, in the room overlooking sun-seeking victims of spring fever. And inside, the council waited 10 minutes to seek the nine-man quorum needed to conduct business.

But part of that business had been predetermined by the 46 participants of the Student-Faculty Retreat a week and a half earlier when they threw a ball, with "student involvement" written all over it, at the council.

And the nine-man squad meeting that sunny day rebounded with all the finesse of a Dennis Browne on the basketball court.

Three council members attended that weekend retreat, and when it was over they felt relieved because their organization suffered a verbal barrage reminiscent of television's "Joe Pyne Show".

And at the meeting, with the memory of the retreat weekend still fresh, he proposed to the other members that the Constitution should be investigated to find out "how much the council can do."

Or, as Dean Donald Pflasterer said, to find out how much "meat" there is in the constitution "which the council hasn't chewed on yet."

The "student involvement" ball was thrown around at the meeting and the council scored four times with such issues as new dress regulations, student participation in the selection of a permanent University President, possible election rule changes and optional finals for graduating seniors.

But all these decisions came only a short time after the retreat where the same questions were

Commission Backs OU Plea

Omaha University ranked number one in the State last Saturday.

OU received a number-one priority for its $433,333 request from the Nebraska Commission for Higher Education Facilities Act.

The request is for a $433,333 federal grant to assist in financing the proposed science building.

Current plans call for a $1.3-million 2-story structure which could be enlarged to at least five stories.

The concrete-block building would be located 80 feet east of the Engg. Building. Most of the parking lot currently there would be dug up.

According to Vice-president—Campus Development George Rachford, the remaining parking lot space would be used by faculty and staff.

Target date for the science building is September 1968.

"We think that if things go all right, we can make it by that time," Dr. Rachford said.

Now the United States Office of Education must give its stamp of approval before OU actually gets the grant. "No building grant recommended by the Nebraska commission has ever been turned down," he added.

OU first applied for science building funds in March 1965. The State Commission turned down the proposal in favor of Kearney State's request.

Six universities and colleges will split the $1,816,691 worth of grants recommended Saturday. Nebraska U. was assigned the second and third priorities, a women's physical education building and a music recital hall.

Bulletin

The Nebraska Legislature voted 25-19 in favor of the OU-NU merger yesterday. The first-round vote came after a kill attempt by Omaha Senator Henry Pedersen.

Notices

The Registrar's Office has announced that official applications for June 1967 graduates are due April 10. Application lists are available in the Registrar's Office Rm. 138 Ad Building.

Fees must be paid at the time of application. They are $15 for master's degrees, $12.50 for bachelor's degrees and $7.50 for associate titles.

All qualified junior and senior men having a grade point above 2.5 should get a formal application blank for membership in Omicron Delta Kappa national honorary.

Applications are available from Dr. Gale Oleson's office (Rm. 213 Ad Building). The completed forms must be returned to Rm. 213 on or before April 7.

asked. Was the meeting, therefore, a fluke, and will the council revert to its usual self shortly?

"No," answered Council President Jim Butler. The council has had an awakening because of the retreat and the quest for more student involvement on campus has started.

But is this quest similar to the legendary quest for the Holy Grail? Butler doesn't believe so. After the memory of the retreat is dimmed, he contends, the attitude of Dr. Kirk Naylor will aid the Council's quest.

The Acting President, according to Butler, has stated he is willing to help in any manner. His aid can come in the form of the council president sitting on administrative committees and possibly the Board of Regents to observe that body's actions.

But this applies to the council president. What is in store for the rest of the student body? A possible sign of things to come is the council committee to investigate the constitution which will hopefully come forth with the "meat" not yet chewed on but quite edible.

The council scored four impressive points two weeks ago, and the members believe they can keep the winning record, which they must to keep the fans happy.

Faculty Members Leaving?

For some time now, the University of Omaha has been engaged in a hard fought controversy over the proposed merger with the University of Nebraska.

The merger and the money crises are generally considered to be the most important problems facing the University at present and a great deal of time and energy has been expended in trying to fulfill the school's financial needs.

But there is another equally important problem facing the University of Omaha.

In the last few months, the rumor has been circulating around campus that some members of the faculty are considering leaving OU.

In general, their reasons for departing have centered around relatively low salaries and the lack of harmony between the Regents, the Administration and the faculty, itself.

Surely these complaints are not unique to OU, but if they are serious enough to cause the loss of faculty members, they certainly warrant investigation.

The University of Omaha is fortunate in having an extremely fine faculty, but the school is not so deep in teaching talent that it can shrug off the loss of even a few instructors.

Since the quality of a university's educators admittedly determines the quality of the school itself, it is essential that every effort be made to assure our faculty both the best possible teaching conditions and the most constructive regents-administration-faculty relationship.

Gary Larsen

Ed. note: Acting President Kirk Naylor told the GATEWAY that "the faculty are concerned and apprehensive" about the uncertainties facing the University. "I am mindful that they are concerned," he added. However, he foresees "no more than the usual (yearly) loss of about 10 per cent" of the faculty.

Letters To The Editor

Council To Have More Power?

Dear Editor:

There has been much said recently about student involvement at OU and particularly about the lack of strength or apathy of the Student Council.

I quote last week's Gateway (editorial) which said that the council is "a social group. It plans dances, Homecoming and Ma-ie Day. Currently it is not empowered to do much more."

As a member of Student Council I welcome this criticism because it shows that OU students are finally becoming interested in their school, but I do believe that this statement was greatly exaggerated.

I do believe, though, that Student Council through the years has become less active in legislative matters than it can and should be.

After attending the Student-Faculty Leadership Retreat and serving as a member of its steering committee, I have found many areas of activity that Student Council should be acting in and soon will be.

In the council's meeting of March 22, I raised this question and read specific parts of our Constitution which show some of the power and duties belonging to us that the administration has assumed.

I believe as a result of this, the council will be trying to get these powers back. I'm sure that in the near future you will see a much more active and powerful Student Council.

Denny Jorgensen

Water Fountain Not For Gum

Dear Editor:

There are apparent structural differences in water fountains, ashtrays and wastepaper cans which would indicate their proper utilization. Three separate incidents within the last week have convinced me that there are some who are unaware of the differences and functions.

Monday while attempting to get a drink, my eyes focused upon a cud of chewing gum expectorated into the fountain by a previous user.

Tuesday a small fire occurred in a hall waste paper can. The cause? A cigarette butt disposed of in the waste can rather than in the ashtray located less than five feet away.

Friday, prior to putting out a cigarette in a hall ashtray, it was necessary to remove the balled-up papers from the ashtray.

Is not the obtaining of a college education geared to accomplishment within our society? I do not believe any extension of the right of self-expression would include behavior as outlined above.

Students Wonder If There Is A 'Real' Student Council

By Sherianne Williams

Is the Student Council doing its job?

Is the Student Council doing any job?

The Gateway interviewed 99 Omaha University students and some of them did not even know a Council existed.

The majority felt the students were not being represented by the group. Others thought it was only another social organization. A few believe the Council is doing as well as can be expected, under the administration's thumb.

Important Issues

Student dress, library hours and parking meters are the three most important issues the students feel the Council should act upon.

But, what do the students expect from the Council?

Clark Rudeen, 19, a business major, said, "The Student Council should be taking action on the merger of Nebraska and OU because this is going to affect the students very much. The Council should be doing everything they can to voice the opinion of the student body."

Pick President

"The Student Council should be helping to elect a new president for the school," commented history major, Bill Larsen.

Bootstrapper George L. Wright believes there should be a Student Council member at all Board of Regents meetings "then they can say they are there, not that they will accomplish anything."

Helen Bojko, freshman math major said, "The Student Council should be consulted on all financial matters, not as a policy making body, but as a 'student voice'."

Bill Buckingham, prelaw freshman, said the council should publicize what they do.

Wants Booklet

Another student, a political science major, wants a booklet published on "What Your Student Council Has Done For You." This assuming they have done something they should make known.

"The Student Council should work on promoting school spirit," said sophomore Christie Winheim.

Wendy Tichy, 18-year-old journalism major, said, "The Student Council has failed in representing the students. The positions they hold are important, but they haven't even begun to accept the responsibility that comes with it."

Doesn't Have Power

Student Council member, Brenda Williams, says the biggest projects of the council are Homecoming and Ma-ie Day. Both are social affairs. She also added, "we don't seem to have the power we should."

The Student Council does have some supporters.

Leon Bockelman, 19, said, "In general, I feel our Student Council has done and is doing as much as they can under the present school administrative restrictions, which definitely need to be revised as to more student voice."

Incidentally, Bockelman is the only student who referred to the council as "OUR" Student Council.

"The Student Council has a tough job because of the apathy of the students," said Pat Duggins, sophomore journalism major.

Need Support

"If they are to have any power in regulating the dress, the election of a new president or the lowering of fees they must gain the support of the students of this University."

Dan Hollingsworth thinks the Student Council is "sort of a group therapy session."

The prelaw sophomore also said, "We have got to elect some effective officials but I don't know how the council can get the power they need to operate effectively."

"It is up to the administration to give more authority to the student government. Some kind of a rapport must exist between the student and faculty to react intelligently in student government."

Nothing Needed

Freshman Dave Coyle said, "There is nothing I feel the council should explore, everything is satisfactory. I don't think the council has the authority, or merits it, to do more than it is."

"I don't think the Student Council should have large part in the administration of OU."

There seems to be a lack of communication between the Student Council and the students they represent.

Perhaps this is the first problem the council should try to work out.

Lot 'L' Opens Later

Why is the faculty parking lot "L" west of the Eppley Conference Center not open to students until 8 p.m.?

"The students were crowding in before 7 p.m.," said Dean of Student Personnel, Donald Pflasterer.

The lot located west of the Library "was probably violated because of its accessibility to the Student Center."

The other faculty parking lots are open to students after 7 p.m. and no problems have arisen.

Dean Pflasterer did not think the violators were in the Library studying, but were attending meetings and as a result were jumping the 7 p.m. gun to get a good parking space.

Faculty members in turn, could not get in the lot even before seven.

To remedy the situation the lot is now closed to students until eight.

"We do not have to let the students use the faculty lots," said Dean Pflasterer, "but we do in order to help out."

This column focuses attention on the problems and questions of OU students.

Any problems or questions The Gateway may be able to seek solutions for can be submitted to The Gateway office, Engr 116. The Gateway reserves the right to decide which questions it will answer.

Artists Meet (in) Waterloo

Three representatives from OU's Art Department are entered in the fourth annual Waterloo Municipal Galleries show in Iowa.

"Pour Me Orange" is the title of David Crisler's oil painting.

In the sculpture competition, Sidney Buchanan, instructor of art form, has entered his "Caterpillar" and "Chrome with Red Bonnet." Instructor Thomas Majeski's "Self-Portrait", a color intaglio print, completes the entries from OU.

The showing runs from April 2-30.

Persuasion Pays Off

The speech and drama departments are sponsoring intramural speaking contests for persuasive and oral interpretative speeches on Monday, April 24.

Finalists will receive cash awards and certificates of merit. Preliminary rounds will be held in speech classes, and applications are also available in those classes.

The schedule of preliminary rounds, results and other information will be posted on the speech and drama bulletin board, Adm. Room 230.

For additional information consult either Richard Albin, Adm. 251J, or Dennis Fus, Adm. 251H.

Ride Trails With The Stud Set

The OU Riding Club held its second organizational meeting at Ponca Hills Riding Academy March 24.

The members were told they could take ten English-style riding lessons for $30 at Ponca Hills. This is an opportunity for college students to ride trained horses under ideal riding conditions.

Students interested should contact Dr. Richard Blackwell, club sponsor, for more information.

It's About Time

Time sharing will be covered at the American Council of Mathematics meeting Wednesday, April 5, at Mr. Kelly's Restaurant.

Guest speaker will be Harry Cantrell, consultant for advanced systems of General Electric in Phoenix, Arizona.

Cocktail hour is 6:30-7:30 p.m., with the dinner immediately following.

Teachers Have Relations

The Public High School in Columbus, Nebr., will be the site for talks on international relations today and Saturday, April 7-8.

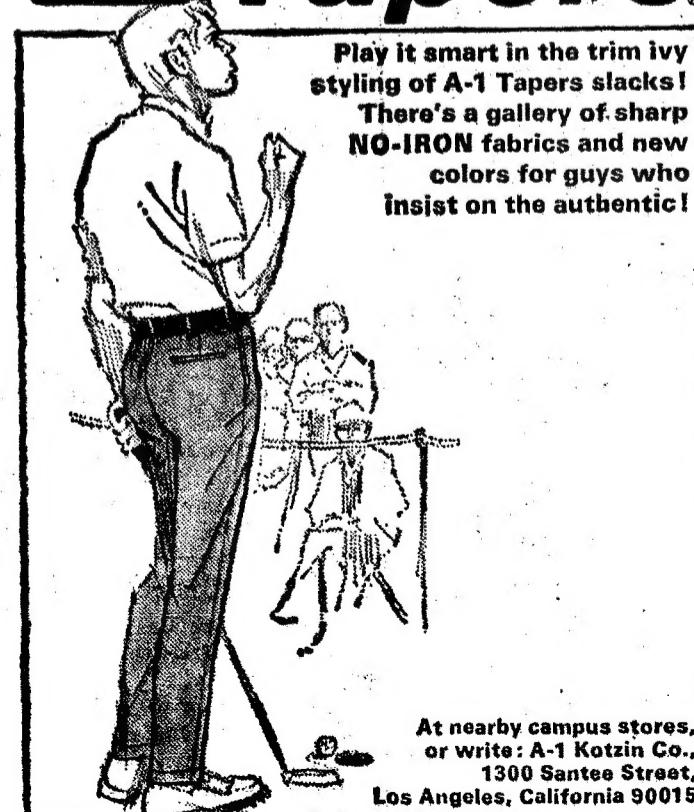

No, Mao and Kosygin are not coming, but many Nebraska high school and college history and social studies teachers are.

For the first time their annual spring meeting will be held in a place other than Omaha or Lincoln. This was necessary because the president, Roy Jeffers, is the principal of Columbus High School.

Many OU history and social studies teachers will be attending. Dr. Paul Beck is this year's conference executive secretary.

Initiates of Phi Kappa Phi will have a chance to become acquainted with the old members at Monday's meeting.

The OU chapter of the national honorary meets in Room 309, Student Center, at 4:30 p.m.

Tuition Decision Depends On Bill

"Tuition will not be lowered solely on the basis of LB 490", Acting President Kirk E. Naylor said at his press conference yesterday morning.

The Acting President reiterated his commitment to lower tuition "as soon as possible", but stated the University would be "in a better position to review tuition" if both LB 490 and the merger bill pass.

On another matter, Dr. Naylor touched on faculty resignations which he believes may be influenced by the uncertainty of academic opportunities under the proposed merger.

He does not believe, however, that the resignations are due to any objections to the merger as such.

The University, he said, must fill about 20 faculty vacancies at the present time, and he expects no more than 30 total vacancies by September.

The academic opportunities he referred to include possibilities of promotion, lower teaching loads and sabbatical leaves.

OU May Host National NAIA Meet

By Jaey Sedlacek

Omaha University is the unanimous choice of the NAIA wrestling coaches to host the 1969 national meet.

OU athletic director Virgil Yelkin reported OU received the invitation during the NAIA National Meet in Lock Haven, Pennsylvania last month.

He emphasized that nothing has been decided definitely. Everything is pending on a financial report being prepared by wrestling coach Don Benning.

The report is expected to be ready to present to the faculty athletic committee when they meet April 13th.

If they approve the national meet plans, they will recommend to the administration that OU hosts the meet.

Acting president Dr. Kirk Naylor, who has already spoken favorably of the plan, has the final word.

Yelkin said he was very much in favor of the meet. He added anytime OU can help the NAIA he is willing to cooperate, providing OU can adequately do the job.

He explained that a national program of this magnitude needs considerable support. He wouldn't like to see OU undertake such a program unless they could handle it as well if not better than anyone else.

Suggested by Ken Cox

Coach Benning said he was first approached about hosting the national tournament during a meeting of the 69 coaches competing in the Lock Haven meet last month.

President of the coaches organization, Ken Cox, of St. Cloud suggested OU to the other mentors as the site for the 1969 meet. He said he was impressed with both the wrestlers and facilities of Omaha when he met Benning's squad in an 18-18 draw early in the season.

The other coaches approved the suggestion unanimously pending approval by the OU administration.

The coaches select the site of the national meet two years in advance alternating sections of the country. Next year's meet is scheduled at Adams St., Colorado.

The United States Olympic

wrestling team will also practice here prior to the games in Mexico City.

If OU decides to host the meet, it could be the largest yet because of its strategic location.

Cost Studies Pending

Benning is waiting for cost studies of previous national meets from the NAIA national office in Kansas City before he can prepare his report for the athletic committee.

He explained that officiating the matches would be the biggest expense. At Lock Haven, five mats were in constant use as the 300 wrestlers battled for the finals. Some referees would have to be brought in from out of town.

The only facility problem, Benning said, would be the locker and shower rooms. OU's field house is bigger than Lock Haven's, and the lodgings around the University are as good if not better than any other location, he added.

The coach cited the advantages of hosting the meet as gaining national prominence for the university and also a boon to local trade.

Equipment for the meet would provide no problem and most could be borrowed from area high schools.

Full Cooperation Necessary

Benning also emphasized the problems involved with such an undertaking. Full cooperation, he said, is required by the faculty, student body and others concerned. Student backing is especially important, he added, since attendance can make or break the meet.

As for enlisting local support from businesses, Benning said he has laid some ground work.

If OU's administration decides they cannot handle the NAIA meet, the coaches selected Superior St., Wisconsin as the first alternate.

If OU ever had a sport worth national recognition it is wrestling. Benning's rapidly growing program is in full swing now and each of his teams has been better than the first.

Next year's team is expected to follow suit since there is not a senior on the District Championship squad.

Finest OU Team

OU sports information director, Mike Moran has compiled these statistics concerning the team: a 10-3-2 season record, finest in OU history; NAIA district title and six individual titles; 12th place in the NAIA National Championship and one runnerup individual.

Also the Indians recorded a prestige building win over Nebraska University and ties with St. Cloud and Northern Illinois, plus a narrow 15-12 defeat to unbeaten Minot State of North Dakota.

The Indian squad also highlighted the season with an important 19-12 win over state rival Wayne State, the NCC Champ before 1,100 fans. The turnout, which included some 250 prep wrestlers in a recruiting effort, was a record for OU wrestling attendance.

AAU Meet Next

Benning's wrestlers are now preparing for the AAU meet in Lincoln next week.

The meet is strictly individual and open to all amateur wrestlers, including high school and those not even in college.

OU is sending four men: Curlee Alexander, Phil Taylor, Kinze Williams and Reggie Williams.

This is only the second AAU meet that has been close enough for OU to send wrestlers.

Indians End Road Trip 3-3

By John Whisman

The Indians take an even 3-3 record to Hastings today for a doubleheader.

The busy baseballers then travel to Lincoln tomorrow to face Nebraska Wesleyan in a nine-inning single affair.

The first conference game for coach Virgil Yelkin is a doubleheader Tuesday against Washburn at Topeka. The Ichabods are off to a fast start winning six of their first seven this spring.

Sophomore Jack Holder is turning into the ace of the pitching staff. He extended his record to 8-0 for two years in winning two games on the first road test.

Holder spun a one-hitter in the first game of the Phillips Tournament against Southeast Oklahoma as the Indians edged the Oklahomans 1-0.

Four Indians were named to the Tourney team at Enid. Host team Phillips led the balloting with five players selected.

Harold Lenz at shortstop, Mike Rice at first-base, Lon Bernth of the outfield corps, and Holder were the Omahans tabbed for tourney honors.

Errors again plagued the young Indians in the title game at Enid. The Indians were guilty of five miscues, three of which came in the wild fourth inning as Phillips grabbed three runs on one hit.

Until the finale the Indians had little trouble collecting runs and hitting the ball. Mike Rice, however, was the only Indian to get a hit as only 23 batters went to the plate in the seven inning fray.

For the six-game road trip, the pitching and hitting proved adequate, but the fielding was poor. The Indians committed a total of 16 errors for the southern swing.

Nine of the errors were charged against Don Crum at third base. His replacement, rookie Joe Velardi was guilty of two miscues.

If the pitching continues to hold up and the batters continue to hit well and the Indians can plug some of the holes in the defense the Indians could be a tough team as in the past.

There are a lot of "ifs" in the outlook of this year's team. Most of the early difficulties to date have been lack of poise in the infield. As soon as the rookies mature the infield should tighten up.

What independent student organization has enjoyed the most success in intramural athletics in the history of the University?

What independent student organization has won more major intramural sports titles under one banner in OU's history?

What independent student organization was instrumental in the election of an independent to the Student Council?

The answer, The Team.

The Team organized in 1964 originally started out as the Masterbatters but because of evil connotations the name was changed to the Meadowlarks before Marty Thonen suggested the present name.

The oddity about The Team is that they have no dues, no pins, no identification cards, no required grade point and no qualifications other than talent and the will to win.

Team Won Swim Meet

An example of The Team's successful recruiting program was witnessed at the recent intramural swimming meet. Prior to the meet four Team members were entered and at the meet's end the Team had a victory and nine new members.

It makes one wonder whether the four members came to swim or recruit prospective members.

In 1965 the organization added ten new members and today the number of members is undeterminable because no records are kept.

The Team doesn't believe in paper work.

As yearlings in 1964 they were also rans in basketball and didn't do much better the following year other than gaining some valuable experience which has earned them the intramural championship the last two years.

May Win Track Meet

The reason they were never able to do any better than third place for the last two years according to a Team member was the lack of organization in the fall.

Blight area of participation in the organization can be found in intramural golf, tennis, archery, bowling and curling.

The Team placed second in the indoor and outdoor track meets for the same number of years but if the other teams acquire a few broken legs or find themselves short on personnel The Team no doubt will win their first track championship.

Track Men Nipped; Vault Record Set

By Rudy Smith

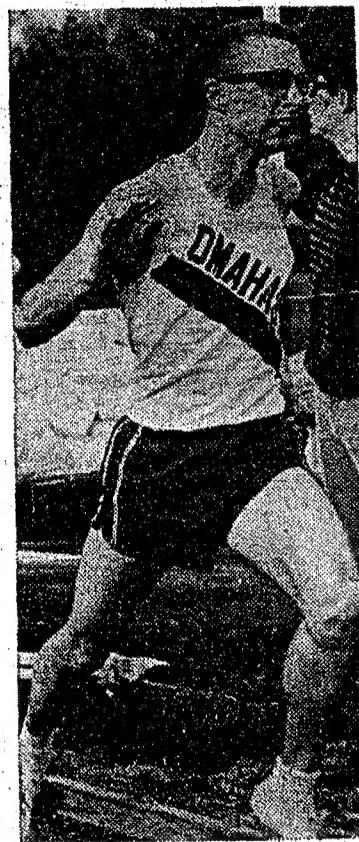

The University of Omaha track team will compete in the Kearney Invitational Track Meet tomorrow after absorbing a heartbreaking defeat against Dana College Tuesday.

Wednesday the team will travel to Midland College for the Midland Relays.

The University of Omaha track team won seven of the ten running events but was edged by Dana 74-70 during the first outdoor encounter at home.

Bruce Jennings continued his assault on the OU pole vault record by erasing the eight year-old record of Dave Garrett by vaulting 13-8.

The old record was 12-7 established in 1959.

Spring Ball Greets 50

By Dan Parker

Spring football drills will begin Monday with an anticipated 50 candidates reporting.

Coach Al Caniglia's gridders will toil from April 10 until May 12, with the annual spring scrimmage May 6.

In the fold will be 27 returning lettermen, including quarterback Marlin Briscoe. Briscoe, given another year of eligibility by the CIC, sustained a fractured vertebra in his neck at the start of last season.

Marlin's back-up man will be senior Lew Garrison, who developed and curbed an arm ailment in one year. When not handling the quarterback chores, Garrison will also play regular defensive halfback for the Indians.

The Indians will continue to use the 4-3 pro-type offense this season, which means Rick Davis can return to flanker where he led the team in receiving in 1965. Ron Sayers and Greg Kavan should add to the Indian ground attack at halfback and fullback respectively.

"My outlook is one of experimentation in spring ball. Spring is the time when the fundamentals of the game are stressed over team play, with perhaps the biggest stress on individual techniques," Caniglia concluded.

Girl's Ball Clinic At 8

Any women interested in softball and its techniques should attend OU's softball clinic tomorrow from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Sponsored by OU's Women's Physical Education Department the clinic will begin with registration at the Fieldhouse.

The session will feature speakers and demonstrations on every phase of the sport from batting to the rules.

OSA Umpire-In-Chief Hank McCourt will also hold a special session devoted to the rules of the game and what is involved in making the decisions behind the plate or on the bases.

Rich Carey was OU's only other double winner. He won the mile and two mile.

Heading into the last event OU had a 70-69 lead and Jim McMahon the third runner on the OU mile relay hit a hurdle placed close to the track with his baton which cost the team a ten yard lead and a possible victory.

OU fortunes in the weak field events have risen with the addition of basketball star Dennis Browne on the discus chart. The St. Joseph, Missouri, athlete was the nation's leading prep discus man during his senior year at St. Joe Central.

Gift Bazaar To Replace Cutest Pan - Ugliest Man?

"An international gift bazaar would give a new accent to responsible giving," explained Heather Smith, WUS Field Representative, on a visit to campus this week.

World University Service, an international organization is one of the recipients of the Ugliest Man/Cutest Pan Community Chest drive. Because of a decrease in funds Miss Smith was here to initiate fund-raising through a bazaar.

Numerous other universities have already used the idea in place of Ugliest Man/Cutest Pan contest. Companies send goods to be sold at the bazaar to universities free of any charge.

WUS is an arm of UNESCO with consultative status. It is sponsored by such organizations as the United States National Student Association, National Federation of Catholic College Students and the National Student Christian Federation.

Active in over 60 countries, WUS provides aid for lodging facilities for needy students, student health facilities, educational facilities and equipment for students having the will to study but lacking these important items.

Heather Smith has been working with WUS since August. She was born in Scotland but is a Canadian national due to the citizenship of her father.

Miss Smith completed undergraduate work at Duke University where she first became interested in WUS. She received her Masters degree in Social Psychology from Columbia University.

Working without pay except for living expenses she has traveled to approximately 50 universities throughout the country.

Essay To Win $250

The Philip Sher Essay Contest May 5 deadline is later than usual this year.

In the previous years the contest has been scheduled so the winning essay could be announced at the Honors Day Convocation.

Failure of the students to respond to the contest in recent years had resulted in some indecision as to whether or not the contest should be held.

"This award is one of the better which this university offers," said Dean Don Pflasterer, "not only because of the money involved but also the honor which comes with having the work published."

The contest was first offered in 1954 by Dr. Philip Sher, a prominent Omaha physician. Dr. Sher established a fund which would award $250 to the University of Omaha student submitting the best essay promoting the understanding among people of diverse races and religions.

The essay, entitled "Racial and Religious Mutual Respect," must be original and contain a statement of the problem as well as a consideration of solutions to the problems of race and religion as they exist in the United States.

Judging of the essays will be based on originality, thoroughness, organization and expression.

Entries should contain no fewer than 2,000 and no more than 3,000 words on typed, double spaced, 8 1/2" by 11" sheets of good quality paper.

All undergraduate students carrying 12 hours or more and maintaining a "C" average are encouraged to apply at the office of the Dean of Student Personnel.

Additional information may be obtained from the Office of the Dean of Student Personnel in Ad Room 240.

An Evening's Frost' Out Does Joe Pyne

By Clarence W. Wilson

The College of Continuing Studies brought to OU one of the greatest productions this writer has ever seen.

The University of Michigan Professional Theatre Program's production of "An Evening's Frost," is a dramatic portrait of the Poet Robert Frost. Donald Hall based it on the poet's poems, life and conversations.

Will Geer, a theatre veteran of real distinction, portrayed the poet as an old man. Jack Davidson, also a theatre veteran, portrayed Frost as a young man. Two other veterans of the stage, Thomas Coley, the narrator and Anne Gee Byrd played the woman.

These people presented thirty-eight of Frost's poems, excerpts of three poems and a poem by Frost's closest friend Edward Thomas.

The works of Frost, although not autobiographical, were used to present a biography of Frost the man much in the same way as Thomas Holbrook did in "Mark Twain Tonight."

It is too bad that many expected an evening of poetical readings. Perhaps many didn't come because this is what they expected. I went expecting this, but I was very mistaken.

Most of Frost's works lend themselves very well to good vigorous dramatic interpretation. Geer and company gave the OU audience exactly that: good vigorous drama.

"Home Burial" and "The Death of the Hired Man" were powerful and moving.

Those people who missed this really missed one of the strongest theatrical presentations of drama ever to reverberate in the Administration Auditorium.

Those who stayed home had TV's second presentation of "Death of a Salesman" and the "Joe Pyne Show." OU's presentation certainly outdid the latter of the two.

How come U. S. National Bank customers keep out of traffic jams?

You won't find U. S. National Bank customers stalled in heavy downtown traffic . . . trying to jockey into a drive-in bank.

Their drive-in bank is at 20th and Douglas where the going is easier — where you go right in without delays.

In fact, the U. S. National drive-in is on the way to or from the crowded traffic snarls. If you're going downtown or coming back, chances are 20th and Douglas is on your route. Wheel right in, do your banking, and you're in and out in less time than it takes to say — "Boy, that savings account at the U. S. National Bank is sure growing fast with the high interest they pay, and am I ever glad I have a checking account to keep accurate track of bill paying, and they sure treat you right at this bank!"

Maybe even less time than that!

But whether you're on wheels or on foot, banking at the U. S. National helps keep you out of all kinds of jams — financial ones, that is. And drive carefully — the money you save can be your own.
